

Alumni Achievement

Craig “Speedy” Claxton’00

Craig “Speedy” Claxton graduated from Christ the King High School in 1996. He received a scholarship to Hofstra University. Mr. Claxton guided the team to the NCAA championship during his senior year. Shortly after, he was drafted in the first round by the Philadelphia 76ers. He continued on to have a 10-year professional basketball career, which included winning a championship in 2003 with the San Antonio Spurs. Craig Claxton has spent the last three years as a college basketball scout for the Golden State Warriors. He is now a special assistant to the head basketball coach at Hofstra University. Mr. Claxton enjoys spending time with his wife, Meeka, and their two daughters, Aniya and London.
