Long Islanders John Magnus and Ray Milek built duck hunting boats for local hunters from 1960-1990. Avid outdoorsman themselves, they hunted waterfowl for years in the area around their bay house, located off Freeport, N.Y.

The collection is comprised of a journal that spans the years 1984-2003, and which documents the activities of Magnus, Milek, and their friends during trips to the bay house. Many of the journal entries concern duck and goose hunting, while others deal with the routine maintenance of the bay house.
