Every year over the last decade, one of my summer highlights has been the day I spend with the students at Sportscasting program at Hofstra University. I always enjoy sharing stories and anecdotes about my career, as well as distributing the materials that I use in preparing for a broadcast.

Hopefully the tales I share from my high school years on Long Island (Port Washington) to my experience at New York University to my 23-year professional career can help inspire the students to shoot for their goals. I cherish giving back to the community, and Ed Ingles has been a dear friend for many, many years.

Among my favorite parts of the program is the interaction with the students, including the tremendous questions they ask. I can't wait to sit back and watch and listen to some of the students as they embark on their careers in the years to come.
