Instructor: John Santucci
Segment Producer for ABC's Good Morning America

During the Spring and Fall of 2009 I had the wonderful opportunity of teaching two of Hofstra continuing education broadcast classes to adults and young people interested in our business. It was a great opportunity to provide a sampling of writing, radio, television and online reporting. These courses not only gave students real world situations but the opportunity to meet with those who practice these skills each day.

In many cases, I even learned something new! Highly recommend these courses for any student unsure which path to take or an adult looking into a different career. The resources of Hofstra and the assets of the various instructors show you a world that is fast paced, complex and connecting with people across the globe.
