Scope and Content Note

Jacqueline Bolling Binnian (1921 – 2005) graduated from the Harvard-Radcliffe Program in Business Administration in 1960 and began a career on Wall Street. Following her marriage in 1961 to William Binnian, a great-grandson of Herman Melville and a vice-president of Pan American World Airways, Binnian would leave her career on Wall Street to begin a life-long campaign dedicated to the preservation of the environment of the North Shore of Long Island.

In 1964, Jacqueline Binnian and a group of fellow conservation-minded citizens created “Action for Preservation and Conservation of the North Shore L.I. Inc.” The group would go on to concentrate its efforts in preserving the natural environment of the North Shore of Long Island, including initiating efforts to have Route 25A declared a “scenic and historic” locale, defeating attempts to widen roadways that would damage local wetlands, stopping harbor dredging efforts that could upset the ecology of Long Island’s waters, joining the Long Island Sound Study Citizens Advisory Committee and spear-heading the adoption of recycling legislation.

Earlier in the same year, Binnian and William McAnney, President of the Huntington Audubon Society successfully lobbied the Huntington Town Board to create a Conservation Council (eventually the Conservation Board). Researcher W. Keith Kavenagh, along with members of the Conservation Council, investigated the background and laws concerning local trustee lands. The result of this research and cataloguing was Vanishing Wetlands, Land use and the Law, Suffolk County, NY 1650-1979, published by the Sea Grant Institute in 1980. These efforts introduced Jacqueline Binnian to trustee lands and sparked an interest that would continue throughout her life.

Trustee lands are tidally influenced lands held in the public trust, administered by the towns or trustees for the benefit of the people of the towns and the general public. The towns and town trustees may award leases, easements or grants for the use of trustee lands, and may establish rules governing the use of those lands. Tidal trustee lands provide habitats and breeding grounds for fish, shellfish and other wetland dwelling wildlife, provide access for recreational activities such as swimming, boating and visual enjoyment, and generate billions of dollars for the state economy. Because trustee rights and lands predate the American Revolution, the records regarding ownership and administration are often incomplete or contradictory, leading to much misinformation and mystery. Binnian would spend her lifetime working to address the mystery of trustee lands and to promote public awareness of their ownership of and rights to these lands.

During the late 1960s and early 1970s, Jacqueline Binnian would work to oppose the construction of the Oyster Bay-Rye Bridge and New York State’s attempts to take the Caumsett right-away for creation of the Caumsett State Parkway. She co-chaired the Council for Better Transportation Planning, helping defeat the Transportation Bond issue in Suffolk County, in favor of improved public transportation. Her efforts with Caumsett assisted in the creation of the “education-recreation” concept of Caumsett State Park.

During 1970, Binnian worked to get the Town of Huntington to lease land that NY State had condemned for the Caumsett State Parkway, in order to provide shorefront parkland in Cold Spring Harbor. Binnian would continue to have an interest in preserving the historic village of Cold Spring Harbor, working to oppose the alteration of historic locations throughout the village, as well as preserve the harbor's shoreline.

In 1990, the New York State Department of Transportation unveiled plans to build a five-lane highway at the head of Cold Spring Harbor and Route 108. In response to this, Jacqueline Binnian formed "Concerned Citizens for 25A"; a group dedicated to preserving the local wetlands and defeating the proposed five-lane highway.

In addition to her work in the preservation of Trustee Lands, Mrs. Binnian sought to preserve the historical heritage of the Town of Huntington. In 1991, she and Rufus Langhans, then Huntington Town Historian, formed the Alliance for the Preservation of Coindre Hall Park to preserve, protect, and restore the former estate of George McKesson Brown which, while now owned by Suffolk County, had fallen into neglect.

In 1994, Binnian would take a leave of absence from ACTION in order to spend more time as a researcher of Long Island Trustee Lands. Two years later, the Concerned Citizens for 25A successfully defeated the New York State Department of Transportation's plans for the proposed five-lane highway extension.

In 1998, residents of Cold Spring Harbor School District 2, comprising Cold Spring Harbor, Laurel Hollow and Lloyd Harbor, realized the need for independent recognition from the Town of Huntington. To assist this process, Binnian began to research the records of the old Cold Spring Harbor Village Improvement Society. While the Society still remained under the title of the Cold Spring Harbor Library, many of its former civic duties were no longer handled by the Society. Seeing a need for a group of "watchdog citizens," Binnian consulted with other local residents; efforts which ultimately resulted in the formation of the Cold Spring Harbor Area Civic Association, Inc. This civic group is dedicated to the preservation of the local coastline, and preserving and protecting the historic village of Cold Spring Harbor.

Binnian would remain active in her last years with her pursuit to properly research and document lands in the public trust along the North Shore of Long Island. Working with a Rauch Foundation grant through the Cold Spring Harbor Fish Hatchery, she would lay the foundations for the organization and preservation of documents relating to trustee lands in and around the Town of Huntington. Jacqueline Binnian died on May 7th, 2005.

The Jacqueline Binnian Collection is composed of twenty-four series. Materials included in these series consist of correspondence, news clippings, newsletters, minutes of meetings, photographs, maps, resolutions, land indentures, books, periodicals and other published materials, reports, agendas, public notices, drafts, notes, audio and video recordings, blueprints and plans, by-laws, articles of incorporation, government documents, address lists, contact information, budget reports, town code, proposals, federal and state legislation, promotional materials, public statements, press releases and ephemera.
