Reginald André, B.B.A. '04

Reginald André is vice president of the Alternative Investments & Manager Selection (AIMS) Group at Goldman Sachs and Co. in New York City, where he is also co-business unit manager for the Risk Management & Analytics (RMA) teams across the AIMS businesses. Mr. André focuses on leading the capital management, cash and credit management and communications management functions as well as new business development and infrastructure within the AIMS Private Equity Group (PEG), a fund-of-funds private equity business within Goldman Sachs Asset Management. He also serves as deputy diversity champion for the Goldman Sachs' Investment Management Division. Mr. André joined Goldman Sachs and Co. as an analyst in 2004, focusing on client reporting within PEG.

While earning a B.B.A. in finance in the Zarb School of Business at Hofstra University, Mr. André served as student president of the Financial Management Association (FMA), a preprofessional organization with the purpose of preparing students for careers in finance. As student president, Mr. André and his executive board worked diligently to enlist Zarb alumni in finance to return to campus to share their experiences and offer guidance, organize finance-focused career preparation events, and drastically increase student attendance and participation. Since graduation, he has maintained a strong connection to the FMA and has applied much of what he learned there to his roles within the Zarb School of Business Alumni Association.

In 2008, Mr. André was asked to help structure and lead the Zarb School of Business Alumni Association's Career Networking and Advisement Committee. He gladly accepted this role and went on to sponsor a number of networking events and develop several successful student-focused programs designed to engage Zarb alumni, the Hofstra Career Center and student-leaders. Many of these programs began in spring 2008, and have consistently run every semester, bringing dozens of Zarb alumni back to campus and reaching hundreds of Zarb students. In 2010, Reginald André was elected to his current role as the Zarb School of Business Alumni Association's first vice president, and works closely with the president to shape the association's goals and oversee and develop the operations of each of its strategic committees.
