At The Hofstra Sports Broadcasting Program I learned the essential skills needed to be a successful sports broadcaster.

The first class I ever took was the Introduction to Sports Broadcasting for Young Women. In this class I was surrounded by other young women with the same passion as me. I was also taught by successful females in the business whose advice was invaluable. This program made me realize how much I enjoyed sports broadcasting.

Some skills I was taught in the other classes was how to host my own sports show, edit my footage, and conduct interviews.

In the summer of 2016, I was awarded the Sports Journalism & Broadcasting certificate. The Hofstra Sports Broadcasting Program gave me the confidence and knowledge I need going into college as journalism major.
